

Meet Tchaikovsky

Composer and conductor Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky visited the United States in 1891 to conduct at Carnegie Hall's very first opening night concert. The Russian composer loved traveling, and he found the lure of the New World—and of New York City—very exciting.

If Tchaikovsky were a guest in your home or neighborhood, where would you take him? Make a Tchaikovsky cut-out using the illustration at right. Take a photo with your cut-out and share it with Carnegie Hall at linkup@carnegiehall.org, on social media using #orchestrarocks or the Twitter and Instagram handle @carnegiehall, or in our Facebook group (Carnegie Hall Link Up).
