

Explore the Accordion

The accordion is a box-shaped instrument that is played by pushing and pulling apart bellows to pump air, while pressing the bass buttons and the keys to play different pitches. It is sometimes called a squeezebox, but the first name for the instrument was harmonika, which is related to the word harmony.

